
Have an elective caesar or fix scar later?

My friend had a Caesar with her first baby and is became pregnant after 3 months with her second. It was so soon that her scar hasn't healed well on one side. She has been recommended to have a Caesar to fix the scar and deliver.

As someone who managed natural deliveries, I feel blessed. I just don't know what to think about her situation. For me there is unnecessary risk in having the baby early - especially for breastfeeding and recovery with a toddler. But I understand her wanting to get the recovery done with in one go. What do you think?
